Hospitals Filled With Soldiers.

Madrid, November 22.—The Imperial special dispatch from Santiago says that Col. Nario with his column has harassed the rebel leader, Macao, for three consecutive days over a route extending from Tumbas to Guatima. Within that time the troops had four combats with the rebels, Macao losing twenty men, while the Spanish had only one killed and four wounded. Col. Nario intends to follow up his successes with vigor. Col. Canellas is confined to the hospital in Baracoa with dysentery. The hospital is filled with Spanish soldiers who are ill with fever.

BRAD STREET'S REPORT.

The Unusually Mild Weather Has Been a Check to Business.

WITH COLDER TEMPERATURE
BUSINESS IMPROVES.

A Continued Decrease in the Prices of Staples—Failures of the Week—Railroad Earnings Compared—The Bank Clearings, Continue of Large Proportions.

New York, November 22.—Bradstreet's tomorrow will say:

The check to general trade conspicuous for the past few weeks, still continues. The unseasonably mild weather and rain, intensified this feature, which is more conspicuous with the south, where the decline in the prices of cotton and consequent check to shipments are held to be partly responsible. The demand for staples increases with the appearance of seasonably cold weather the result being larger orders for woollens, shoes, rubbers and holiday specialties.

Lake shipments are active and the cargoes on outgoing steamers at Montreal are heavy, owing to the close of navigation.

Complaints are made in Texas of reduced shipments of cotton, and the crop estimates there are again lowered. This is in contrast to later reports on the size of the wheat crop, which now place the amount necessary 100,000,000 bushels larger than the crop report last spring. While Philadelphia textile manufacturers are FAIRLY WELL EMPLOYED, they declare it is without material profits.

Boston advices are that foreign woolen dress goods are well cleaned up and the advance on men's heavy wools is sustained. Wool remains quiet, with a fair inquiry. Manufacturers are not adding to their stock. Uncertainty as to the prices of leather is checking the buying of shoes by retailers, which depresses the manufacturing industry.

There is a less demand for iron and steel, and prices for the standard varieties are lower, about a half year's advance having been lost. It will be borne in mind that most of these declines are on the sales from stock. A considerable order if placed with the makers, might have a different effect.

General trade on the Pacific coast

PRESENTS FEW NEW FEATURES. At San Francisco the increasing disengaged grain tonnage depresses the ocean grain freight rates. Tacoma reports lumber shipments active and Portland that lumber business is stimulated by a combination of the mills of three Pacific coast states.

Considerable orders for merchandise continue to leave Seattle for Alaska. Exports of wheat from both coasts of the United States and Montreal this week, flour included as wheat are 2,916,000 bushels, against 2,333,000 a fair week, 8,312,000 in the week a year ago, 2,764,000 in the week of two years ago, 3,465,000 three years ago and 4,082,000 in the like week of 1891.

Notwithstanding the continued evidence of moderate reduction in the volume of business in the recent weeks the total value of bank clearings

CONTINUE IN LARGE PROPORTIONS;

$1,126,000,000, which while it is 3.7 per cent less than last week, is fully ten per cent larger than the corresponding week of last year, nearly 15 per cent larger than in the third week of November, 1893, 1,000,000,000 in the week of two years ago, 1,764,000,000 three years ago and 1,892,000,000 in the like week of 1891.

No less than a week ago, is the comparatively long list of decreases in the prices for staples; among them being: Bessemer, pig iron and steel billets, wheat, corn, oats, pork, lard and coffee. Among the food products cotton, petroleum, hides, live cattle and hogs.

Practically unchanged quotations are reported for turpentine, rosin, tobacco, leather, lumber and coal.

The total railroad earnings reported by roads representing 75 per cent of the railroad earnings capacity of the country, point to a in the volume of the net receipts for the nine months of the year, as compared with the year ago. The total gross and net earnings for the nine months this year are respectively $648,809,639 and $172,694,442, increases over 1894 of 57 per cent gross, and 8 per cent net. The gross and net, 1894, fell off 13 and 19 per cent each from 1893, during the same period. The Granger and Pacific roads show smaller gross returns than a year ago, and these decreases are slight.

Southern roads, which show

in the net, from a year ago, report a correspondingly small decrease. Central, Western, Coal, Southwestern, Trunk, and other roads, which show

WITHDRAWAL OF JUDICIAL MEASURES.

London, November 22.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Times telegraphs that M. Pobiedonosteff, president of the Holy Synod, has written to the ministers of the interior, virtually advising the withdrawal of the extra judicial measures against the Lutherans of the Baltic provinces.

The Sultan Not Sick.

Berlin, November 22.—The Turkish embassy here has written to the news papers denying the rumors that the Sultan is sick.

Egan Coming to America.

London, November 22.—James F. Egan, the dynamite, who was recently released from prison, sailed Wednesday for New York on the White Star liner steamer "Tonic." He will visit the principal towns in the United States soliciting aid for the families of the Irish political prisoners.

Eastern and Granger roads show the heaviest increase of net over a year ago in the order named. Failures number 323 throughout the United States this week, against 295 in the week a year ago, but of increases are in the Middle and Western States.

MAINE WOULD HAVE SUNK.

The Little Cushing Did the Trick in a Mock Encounter.

Newport, November 22.—The United States steamship Maine, is figuratively speaking, at the bottom of the sea, the little torpedo boat Cushing having placed her there twice tonight, in mock combat. The Maine was arranged to try the battle, the Maine using her four powerful search lights and the Cushing to see if she could get near enough to sink her without being seen. The little destroyer was approaching twice to within easy torpedo firing distance before being discovered. This is the first time this has been accomplished against a man-of-war having the search lights.

DEBS FREE AGAIN.

The "Labor Chieftain" Finished His Six Months' Sentence at Midnight.

Woodstock, Ill., November 22.—At midnight last night Eugene V. Debs's six months' term of imprisonment ended, but the labor chieftain did not leave his cell, preferring to remain a prisoner until this morning. Mr. Debs said he would spend today in paying social visits to local friends until 5 p. m., when a special train from Chicago will arrive with a party of three hundred. The train will arrive in Chicago at 7.30 and be met by the various labor organizations of that city.

Sultan Will Oppose.

London, November 22.—The Standard publishes a despatch from Constantinople saying that the great council which assembled Wednesday night was still sitting at the time the despatch was sent considering the questions of admitting additional gunboats to the Bosphorus. All the ministers and high civil, military and naval officials were present in the discussion, as it is felt that the issue is of the gravest kind.

The treaty of Paris renders it difficult for the present existing terms that the Powers ask. If it should refuse, it would possibly lead to the Powers requesting that they be allowed to have three or four vessels each in Constantinople, instead of two each.

Pessimists predict a stubborn resistance at the palace to the request of the Powers also a possible rising should the boats appear. The writer of the despatch believes that the palace will yield.

The Constantinople correspondent of the Times writes that the Sultan is expected that the Sultan will emphatically recommend the postponing of the sending of the ships to Constantinople which, in the present excitement might dangerously inflame the Mohammedan population. The new vessels must be larger than those at present at Constantinople, and it is intended that the 12 ships shall carry a force of a thousand men. The crews of the vessels now in the Bosphorus are barely number 25.

Spanish Infantry Gone to Cuba.

Madrid, November 22.—Two battalions of infantry started from this city yesterday. Their departure was witnessed by several generals and members of the cabinet, the bishop of Sion and a band of students with banners. There were also a number of troops representing the Queen regent and an enormous crowd of the population. The greatest enthusiasm prevailed.

$300,000 Worth of Ivory.

Berlin, November 22.—A dispatch to the Tagelblatt from Zanzibar says the ivory and annamite to be sold by the British trader Stockes who was hanged in the Congo country by the Belgian Captain Lotharier for selling arms and ammunition to natives, has arrived at the coast of German East Africa with $200,000 worth of ivory.

Plain Talk.

London, November 22.—The St. James Gazette commenting on the remarks of Lord Darnley at the banquet given in his honor in Russia last night says: "It was Lord Darnley's proper course not to repeat his accusations but to prove more plausible evidence to support them."

From the Inner Circle.

London, November 22.—The Chronicle publishes a despatch from its Constantinople correspondent saying: "I have conversed with a number of the inner circle and the Sultan has under the direction of the palace officials to rats ready to desert a sinking ship."

My informant says that for years past the Sultan has compelled the finance minister to pay the bulk of the palace expenses, with the result that His Majesty has £1,000,000 saved from his civil list deposits in Russia at a time when the claims that pensions be paid to the widows and orphans of recent victims, are only intended to throw dust into the eyes of the public. It is generally known that the imperial coffers are empty.

English Comments.

London, November 22.—The Times comments on the speech made by Secretary Carlisle at the banquet of the New York Chamber of Commerce. The speech, it says, was forcible and suggestive. It quotes Mr. Carlisle's words: "We must have as good money and credit as our rivals," and says: "These conditions will not be fulfilled while the American party leaders temporize with currency questions and dabble in their wasteful and mischievous experiments in the interests of international trade we welcome the movement towards a better state of things in which President Cleveland and his ministers to are invited to Congress to co-operate."

Withdrawal of Judicial Measures.

London, November 22.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Times telegraphs that M. Pobiedonosteff, president of the Holy Synod, has written to the ministers of the interior, virtually advising the withdrawal of the extra judicial measures against the Lutherans of the Baltic provinces.

The Sultan Not Sick.

Berlin, November 22.—The Turkish embassy here has written to the news papers denying the rumors that the Sultan is sick.

AUBURN'S TURN.

An Exciting Fire in That City Last Night.

THE JAIL WORKSHOP IS TOTALLY DESTROYED.

It Was a Large Building and Was Burned to the Ground—Fire Discovered Shortly After Midnight—The Lewiston Department Goes to the Assistance of Auburn Firemen.

(By Long Distance Telephone to the PRESS.)

Lewiston, November 23.—Auburn had an exciting fire tonight. Shortly after midnight an alarm was sent in from box 16, Auburn, and the department quickly responded. The fire was found to be in the jail workshop buildings and had gained rapid headway when the department arrived. The bright light of the flames served to attract many people, and an excited crowd was soon watching the progress of the flames. The firemen fought hard, but it was soon seen that it was going to be a bad fire to handle and help from Lewiston was summoned.

The Lewiston department responded readily and the efforts of the combined departments succeeded in preventing a spread of the fire to other buildings.

The big workshop, which was a wooden building, was burned to the ground, and is a total loss with all its contents. It was built several years ago and was used by the prisoners for the manufacture of inner soles. The loss will probably reach $20,000.

The stable of Conant & Bradford was damaged somewhat. Fortunately no one was in the building at the time the fire broke out. Had it occurred in the day time when the prisoners are at work there would probably have been a good many Androscoggin County convicts at liberty now.

The progress of the flames was lightning like, licking the building completely up in a short time.

Bridgton's Burglar Scare.

Bridgton, Me., November 23.—The burglar excitement still continues. Special police have been appointed and a meeting of the village corporation is called for next Tuesday evening to take further measures for the protection of the village.

A sensational incident of the week was the attack on Expressman Lyman Spiller Saturday evening. Mr. Spiller's statement of the affair is as follows: Having, as usual, delivered the various bundles, packages and letters, turned his team from Main street into West Depot street, between six and seven, to drive to the stable, opposite the depot, put up the horse and seek his own home in the house adjoining. The night being dark, he carried a lantern. At that time the street was entirely deserted, people who were out, being for the most part gathered at the postoffice, stores, etc.

As he passed the corn factory and was about to drive on to the bridge, he heard a voice, coming from the dark darkness. "Here he is, but the cuss has got light!" "Never mind that—now's our time!" was the response in the same direction. The next instant a man sprang to seize his horse's head, and another fellow attempted to clamber into the wagon from behind. Spiller instantly drew his revolver and fired two shots at the forward assailant. He then turned and fired one charge at the man in the rear. Number one let go of the horse, as the animal, frightened at the firing leaped forward and ran, and exclaimed, "Get out of this! I've got it in the leg!" and number two as quickly parted company with the wagon. Mr. Spiller was not long in getting his team safely quartered within the stable and strongly secured.

Jealousy at the Bottom. Brockton, Mass., November 22.—Investigation of the police department of this city is now closed and the prevailing opinion is that the movement to be the verdict of the Board will be that nothing has been proved regarding the taking of bribes or protection of illegal liquor sellers by any member of the police department. Nothing has been brought out during the evidence that tends to show the least shadow of crookedness of Mayor Whipple's part, or of his laxity in the enforcement of the no-license law or of any neglect on his part in the administration of the affairs of his office. It is generally believed that the board will report that there has been jealousy in the police department and that certain police officers will be reprimanded or suspended.

THE WEATHER.

Rain and Snow.

Boston, November 22.—Local forecast for Saturday: Threatening weather, probably with light rain or snow flurries; stationary temperature; northerly to easterly winds.

Local Weather Report.

Portland, November 22.—The local weather bureau office records as to the weather are the following:
8 a. m. Barometer, 30.54; thermometer, 15.5; dew point, 7; humidity, 65; wind, N.W.; velocity, 4; weather, cloudy.
8 p. m.—Barometer, 30.68; thermometer, 34.0; dew point, 23; humidity, 96; wind, N.W.; velocity, 3; weather, snow.

Mean daily thermometer, 30.0; maximum thermometer, 37.0; minimum thermometer, 14.0; maximum velocity of wind, 6; west; total precipitation, 0.01.

Rebellion in India.

Lisbon, November 22.—Gunboat Tejo is being hastily prepared to take heavy artillery to Goa, the capital of Portuguese India, where rebellion has been in progress for some time. It is now understood that the gunboat Diu, now at Mozambique, has also been ordered to proceed to Goa.

AN EXCITING NIGHT.

Westbrook Has Two Lively Fire Scars.

A Small Fire on Valentine Street—Narrow Escape of the Family of John O'Harra.

Westbrook had a lively time and a good scare last night.

Just after midnight the fire department was summoned to Valentine street where a fire had been discovered in the grocery store of John Burgess. The flames were soon subdued with a damage of about $50. The building is owned by John Burke.

The family of John O'Harra, who lives up stairs, over the store, had a narrow escape and probably owe their safety to the cry of a little child. Mr. O'Harra was awakened by his baby's crying and found the rooms completely filled with smoke, and his family almost suffocated. He got them out, with difficulty.

Just as the department had subdued the flames, they were startled by another alarm from the Dana warp mill, and quickly hurried to the spot.

Here the fire was found to be in the picking room where it had caught in the floor, just over the boiler. The mill was running and the crew at work, so the fire was quickly discovered and soon controlled. The damage will be slight.

MORE FLAMES.

Chicago Adds Another Bad Fire to the List Last Night.

Chicago, November 22.—A fire disastrous to life and property swept through the dry goods and woolen exchange building this morning and five firemen were carried through a floor and buried under the tons of wreckage from the five floors above.

Four of the men lie dead, and a fifth not being seriously injured. One girl fell from a window and received injuries from which she died. A dozen men, women and girls were hurt or overcome by smoke and many were rescued from imminent death. The property loss is estimated at $400,000.

The dead are:

Patrick J. O'Donnell, lieutenant of Engine Company No. 2.

Thomas J. Prendergast, pipeman.

Martin Sherreck, pipeman.

John Downs, pipeman.

Kate Langraf, employed in Stern & Co.

FIRE AT GORHAM.

The House of Conductor Patrick King Is Consumed—Local Items of Interest.

[SPECIAL TO THE PRESS.]

Gorham, N. H., November 22.—The dwelling house of Patrick King, a conductor on the Grand Trunk railway, was burned yesterday afternoon, but very little was saved. Mr. King was absent, and before help could be summoned the fire was beyond control. Only Mrs. King being present to save the contents of the house, which she was unable to do to any great extent. It is a bad loss to them, but is partially covered by insurance.

Mr. W. P. Hatch met with a severe accident last evening by falling upon a stone near his house on Androscoggin street. His leg was broken above the knee and the knee was badly injured, all of which is liable to keep him from his labors for several weeks. Mr. Hatch is a well-known, reliable, energetic and highly respected. The fall was purely accidental.

Mr. A. D. Barrett, one of our druggists who has for some time been troubled with lameness in the ankle, fell and so injured himself further as to make amputation of the foot necessary. Doctors Wight and Marble performed the operation on Wednesday, and the patient is doing well.

For Oscar Wilde's Release.

Paris, November 22.—The Gaulois asserts that a movement is on foot to obtain signatures of Emile Zola, Alphonse Daudet, M. De Goncourt, Francois Coppee, M. Heredia, the Countess Wemrabeau and other distinguished literateurs to an international petition for the release of Oscar Wilde from prison.

The condition of the American sailor as affected by the laws, received exceptionally full treatment. Commissioner Chambliss proposes that the government take full control of the shipping companies' offices, with a view of making them, as designed to be, the sole employment agencies for seamen. The report recommends a reduction from three cents to two cents per tonnage tax on vessels from nearby ports. Free ship building materials for American vessels in the coastwise as well as the foreign trade, are recommended, and the repeal of 18 sections of statutes relating to minor matters is advised on the ground of their uselessness.

DEADLY DRUGS

Donounced by Munyon—Harmless Remedies Make Positive Cures Where Dangerous Dosing Fails—Proof From Honest People Who Have Tried Both Ways.

Mrs. Mangin, 144 W. Twenty-eight street, New York city, says: "I was victimized by allopathic doctors until my system was filled with poisonous drugs, and at last I declared I would never take another dose of allopathic medicine. I read a great deal about Munyon's new Remedies and determined to try them, so last winter when I was attacked by the grip I sent to the drug store for Munyon's Cough Cure and Cold Cure. A SCHOONER 76 YEARS OLD.

The Three-Quarters of a Century Experience of the Julia Ann.

One of the oldest of the schooners of Maine is now taking on board a cargo down at the wharf where J. H. Blake entertains his friends, and they are scattered along the coast for a good many miles. The schooner in question is the Julia Ann, of Winter Harbor, and Capt. Rand claims on evidently safe grounds that "she is still as good as ever," and the insurance companies, take the same view of the ancient craft, and Captain Rand boasts that he is insured in the strongest marine company in the world. For seventy-six years the old schooner has been on the ocean, and according to Captain Rand, who has a good many years to live before he will have attained to the present age of his craft, she has been a great wanderer. A long succession of masters have placed implicit confidence in her strength and she has first and last made many trips to Fox Island after mackerel, and as far as the coast-wise service goes she is familiar with every harbor along the coast.

Captain Rand is her owner as well as master, and he says that she is a lucky schooner, and will get business if there is any. "While she was prepared some twenty years ago, her keel, frame, and floor timbers are the original workmanship of seventy-six years ago, and probably the larger part of the old material is still there. The cabin is very small, but large enough to accommodate the captain and crew, and when the PRESS man was on board the captain was planning to stow away a portion of the cargo in the cabin. "All we want is room enough to move about in," he said, and a glance about the snug space below showed that some portion of the very small cabin was already occupied with the smaller articles of freight. The coastwise trade is looking up, and there are now a number of schooners loading for down the coast. Their cargoes include almost everything from flour to furniture, and there seemed to be a good deal of truth in what an old man remarked, "A skipper has got to know how to buy everything from a bonnet to a bicycle." The old man had been there himself, having for some time been the skipper of a coaster.

THE FIELD OF SPORT.

Portland Athletic Club.

There is great interest among the members of the Portland Athletic club over the sparring exhibition, which takes place at the club house tonight, beginning at eight o'clock. It promises to be one of the finest exhibitions of scientific sparring seen at the club.

The Portland Gun club will hold an all day shoot Thanksgiving day at their grounds on Ocean street, Woodford. A feature of the day will be a hundred bird race for the championship of the club. Hand loaded shells will be on sale at the grounds, loaded with either nitro or black powder. As this will be the last shoot for the season there should be a good attendance.

THE WINTER MEETING.

Of the Maine Historical Society Held Yesterday.

Interesting Papers Read and Discussion Upon Them—No Business Transacted—Librarian Bryant's Report—Brown Thurston Presents Interesting Relics and a Portrait of Seba Smith.

The Maine Historical Society held its winter meeting in Library Hall, Public Library building, yesterday afternoon and evening. His Honor Mayor James P. Baxter, president of the society, presided.

The quarterly report of the librarian and curator, Mr. H. W. Bryant, given below shows the deep interest felt in the society by the citizens of the State of Maine.

It will be seen that the contributions since the annual meeting in June have been of great value as well as variety.

The Laws of Maine, volume 3 of the Maine Daily Journal, 1834; Ancestry of Levi P. Morton, Connecticut Revolutionary records, Chute family genealogy, History of the 27th Maine Regiment, Whitney family genealogy, Life of Capt. Benj. J. Willard, Allen's history of Norridgewock, roll of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery of Massachusetts, bound volumes of the Portland Transcript, Suco Valley settlement and genealogies, many documents in the Swedish language.

The additions to the cabinet since last June include: Pen drawings of the mansion of Judge Samuel Freeman, Middlebury, Conn.; parchment signed by Gen. Henry Knox and many others of 1793; tax notice of Falmouth of 1747; old documents and newspapers from Ipswich, Mass.; fragments of the Charter Oak, Hartford, Conn.; log books of Portland privateers; the first piece of baggage checked from Halifax to San Francisco in 1873; Egyptian relics; documents of Gen. Knox; portrait of Judge Samuel Freeman, powder horn of Ezra Brown of Windham killed by an Indian chief in 1736; replica of the bust of Rev. Dr. Cyrus Hamlin.

Mr. Brown Thurston presented a portrait of "Jack Downing," Seba Smith, and a quantity of relics given Mr. Brown by the granddaughter, Miss Oaks Smith.

A unanimous vote of thanks was tendered the donors.

Charles K. Allen of Dresden read an interesting and carefully prepared paper on the character and work of Rev. Jacob Bailey, the first missionary of the Church of England on the Kennebec in 1700. Mr. Allen in his opening remarks urged the duty of all historians to put aside prejudice and consider fairly and justly the merits of the characters they are called upon to portray. Much of the material was new, for the simple reason that historians had not dared print the facts on account of prejudice. Jacob Bailey was born in Rowley, Mass., in 1731, of poor parents, whose social position was at the bottom of the ladder. As a boy he was superior to his surroundings. Although he graduated at the foot of his class in Harvard, it was rather because of puritanical prejudice, than lack of scholarship. There was no royal road to knowledge for the royalists in those days. He was first a Congregational minister, but after a time embraced the Episcopal faith. The story of his trip to England to be ordained, was graphically told, plentifully illustrated with anecdotes from the journal kept by Mr. Bailey.

The historian was obliged to confess that the reverend gentleman's sermons were not to be compared with his miscellaneous writings for brilliancy of style, being in fact dull. His trial, reprieve, final banishment from Maine, his indefatigable industry in his new field of labor, Annapolis, N. S., where he died and was buried after a long illness, were briefly recounted. A high tribute was paid the high moral character and personal worth of the frontier missionary. Quotations from Dr. Bailey's record of the delusion of witchcraft were given, which showed his minute sense of justice. His arraignment of the Puritans for claiming rights which they were not willing to grant to others, voices very accurately the sentiment of today. Moorehead is called "Sebin." Mr. Bailey's contribution to the history of Eastern Maine is invaluable.

Some pertinent remarks were made on the difference between Jingoism and patriotism, and the speaker asked with emphasis if the honor paid the Queen by all Britons, the reverence of the Germans for their Emperor and the Russians for the Czar, do not contrast favorably with the ridicule and abuse heaped upon the so-called Chief Magistrate of the United States, of either party, and he wondered if the American people revered anything except plutocracy and pugilism.

A spirited discussion followed in which the president was of the opinion that Mr.

Allen was not wholly without prejudice. Hon. Geo. F. Talbot thought that the frontier missionary must have been an uncomfortable citizen and was very gently dealt with.

Mr. Samuel A. Drake of Boston, being called upon by the president, responded briefly. Mr. Drake called attention to the very good reasons why Germans and Russians do not speak ill of their sovereigns. He would have Americans uphold the policy and institutions of their own country. Dr. Burrage would have a more careful criticism of the sources of history than the readers of the paper had evinced. Dr. Dalton spoke a good word for the character of Mr. Allen, and expressed the hope that Mr. Allen would carry out his purpose of writing a new life of the frontier missionary, but stoutly protested against the defamation of the Massachusetts Puritans.

He explained the reason why a bright writer wrote dull sermons. Zeal and earnestness were not the fashion in the Church of England in the 18th century.

Attention was called to the gratitude, frequently expressed today, by the Church of England to the Puritans for the liberty they secured for all religions.

Dr. Dalton closed with an eloquent tribute to New England which won an enthusiastic burst of applause.

Rev. Robert Gutch, the pioneer minister of the Kennebec, was the title of an able and thoughtful paper by Rev. Henry O. Thayer of Gray. The earliest records of Robert Gutch show that he was a farmer and land owner in the colony of Salem, where his name appears in the church register. In 1690 there is a record of the payment to the Indian sagamores for 500 acres on the Western side of the Kennebec, upon a part of which now stands the city of Bath. The site of his home is not known with certainty, although tradition points to two, as possible. In his public relations he was evidently a leader among his fellows, a trustworthy and honest citizen, the first signer of the King's order.

He was drowned in the summer of 1697. In the law suit which followed the sale of his lands, the fact of his ministerial service in "Long Reach," was brought out. His little church stood unscathed through the three Indian wars. Of his standing as a minister we know very little.

His surroundings would indicate that he was affiliated with the Congregational church. The privations of the pioneers of Maine, were pathetically evinced by the inventory of household furniture, chiefly noticeable for what it lacked.

The history of the settlement of New Gloucester, Cumberland county, was presented by Mr. John W. Penney of Mechanic Falls. New Gloucester, Maine is the direct descendant of Gloucester, Mass., and that of Gloucester, England.

Sixty men were given a charter by the General Court of the Massachusetts Bay Colony to found this goodly Maine town on the back side of North Yarmouth. The titles affixed and prefixed to their names, indicate that they were men of note. Tuesday, November 2, 1763 the records were read to New Gloucester, the proprietors' meeting was held in the block house. The first proprietors' meeting was held in 1737 in Gloucester. Fortunate in natural beauty and richness of soil the new settlement set to work with a will, built a church, a school house, dwellings and a road 12 miles long and 12 feet wide. John Millet cut the way, which while it ruined him financially is today an enduring monument to his faithfulness and ability as a road maker, being the principal thoroughfare between New Gloucester and Yarmouth.

Stories of Pastors Foxcroft and Stinchfield, Col. Isaac Parsons and others of the early leaders, a detailed account of their struggles, triumphs and celebrations, was listened to with great attention.

Mr. Penney, presented to the society a copy of the records of the town from 1739-1897 and a piece of the Block House.

EVENING SESSION.

At the evening session Dr. H. S. Burrage, vice-president of the society, presided and introduced the essayist of the evening, Mr. Nathan Gould of Portland, who gave a full and extremely entertaining account of Col. Edmund Phinney's regiment, the first one sent out of Cumberland county in the War of the Revolution. Mr. Gould briefly reviewed the stirring times antedating the firing of the "shot heard round the world," and drew a vivid word picture of the mustering in of Col. Phinney's regiment. Entering active service just after the Battle of Bunker Hill, it was their fortune to participate in the events of a time filled with anxiety and alarm, although it did not lead to the great battles of the war. In any great decisive battle. Extracts were read from diaries kept by the soldiers and preserved by their descendants.

Letters of George Washington and Jeddediah Preble were read. The history of the organization of the Continental army followed, Col. Phinney's being regiment 18. Col. Phinney was of Pilgrim stock, his ancestors were noted for their bravery and soldierly qualities. He was a zealous patriot, distinguished for his honesty, his integrity and his unswerving loyalty. He died in 1808, aged 85.

Brief biographical sketches of the staff officers and the captains and officers of the eight companies were given.

All through the paper, reminiscences of Washington, Warren, "Old Put," and other heroes of the Revolution abounded.

Mr. Gould was tendered a vote of thanks by the society.

Many of the Sons and Daughters of the Revolution were present at the evening session.

At the next monthly meeting, December 19th, Hon. W. W. Thomas, Jr., will be essayist of the evening at which time he will read a paper on New Sweden,

FORTUNATE TO BE HERE AT ALL.

The Tough Experience of the Three Master Henry Clausen, Jr.

Yesterday morning, the Bath three-master Henry Clausen, Jr., arrived with the outward marks of having passed through a very rough experience. When seen at the office of Chase, Leavitt & Co., Captain H. O. Appleby, said that they had a very rough time, and that he was well satisfied to have reached port even with his schooner leaking badly and with sails torn.

The schooner is from the South, with a cargo of pine lumber, consigned to Boston parties. When off Cape Hatteras, the 13th, she struck into the great storm of that day with the wind blowing up to the hurricane pitch. She shifted her cargo, and was strained so badly that from that time onward the men were kept at the pumps night and day. Captain Appleby made Vineyard Haven the 19th, and anchored for a day in order to rest his almost exhausted crew. He then sailed for Boston and ran directly into the very fury of the great gale.

The cargo shifted still more, and the schooner had a heavy starboard list. The leak increased, and the men were again forced to stand at the pumps night and day. The wind was very high, and when twenty miles off Boston light, the captain was forced to give up the hope of being able to make Boston, and hardly knew what to do. The sails were reefed, but the mainmast and foremast were simply torn in pieces. To use the graphic words of a sailor: "The sails couldn't look worse, if they had been slit out with a carving knife." This left the schooner in bad shape, and the situation was made still worse when they encountered the snow storm and extremely cold weather, reported by other captains who made this port after the gale.

The ice then formed very rapidly, and it was found very hard to work the already crippled schooner. The men suffered greatly, exposed as they were to the cold, and because they passed so rapidly from one extreme of temperature to another, and were forced to stay at the pumps all the time. Captain Appleby ran for Portland, but it was only with the early morning that he sighted the two lights. He kept off the harbor and was taken in by a tug.

It was impossible for him to ascertain the extent of the leak, and so wired for orders. The water was still pouring in, and the men were at the pumps. Practically they were in constant trouble from the time they encountered the storm of the 13th, until they made this port. A full set of sails will be necessary for one thing, and the schooner will have to be overhauled before she will be fit for sea again. The gale of the 13th, is described as having been very violent and likely to prove to have been destructive also.

GOVERNMENT PAID THE BILL.

Sequel of the Wreck of the Ship Arabia of Bath at Cape Horn.

Capt. McCloon of Deering, captain and port owner of the big 2200-ton ship Arabia, that was totally wrecked on a barren island near Cape Horn, last summer, has recently received from the United States government the guarantee that the government would pay the charges demanded by the English vessel as compensation for bringing the shipwrecked crew of the Arabia from the barren island up to Buenos Ayres. The government always pays such expenses of shipwrecked crews, after the facts are fully substantiated.

Arrived at Buenos Ayres the United States consul of course took charge of the crew and sent them home by steamer. If they have no money, the government pays the expenses. Altogether there were 30 persons, rescued from the barren island by the English bark. The cost of feeding and caring for that number of people on a voyage from Cape Horn to Buenos Ayres was of course quite a bill of expense.

The Houghton brothers of Bath, were the managing owners of the Arabia.

A business man is not the most patient creature in the world. He cannot stop work every minute to bother with an irritating skin disease, or a hacking cough that insists on breaking into his bargain-making. Neither will he wait to hear any long-drawn-out story of the cause of his ailment. He doesn't care two straws about a fine spun theory of how he should treat himself. He may be predisposed to scrofula, or consumption. "That," he will tell you "has nothing to do with the case." He wants to be well. If he can be cured, write out a prescription and send in your bill. So, here's the first part of the proposition.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a medicine that permeates the whole body as water goes through a sponge. It is a microbe hunter and a microbe killer. It is a well-known fact that many persons of scrofulous blood, encourage the breaking out of unsightly sores, to prevent the disease going to the lungs. There is no need of living in this state of dread and discomfort. Purify the blood. It can be done. The Golden Medical Discovery will cure 99 per cent. of all consumptive cases, also all other lingering, bronchial, throat and lung diseases. Don't allow a druggist to persuade you into taking something that he says is "just as good." Maybe it's better for him—better for his profits. Take the "Golden Medical Discovery"—the greater discovery of the age. In addition, in order to know yourself better, send to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y., 21-cent stamps to cover cost of mailing only, and get in return, Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. It is a book of 1008 pages, illustrated, and is full of common sense talk that any one who can read will understand.

And here is the testimony of Mrs. R. E. Peters of Carey, Ohio, in regard to the "Golden Medical Discovery." "I had a troublesome skin disease. Suffered much from scrofula. Nothing helped me until I tried the 'Golden Medical Discovery.' A year or two later I had lung trouble. Again the 'Discovery' cured me."

ASPARAGUS ENDORSED.

THE USE OF ASPARAGUS IN MEDICINE OFFICIALLY RECOGNIZED.

Eminent French Physicians Have Found It Valuable—What the "U. S. Health Reports" Says About Sparagus Kidney Pills and Their Curative Powers.

Asparagus is a kidney tonic. It builds up and invigorates the kidneys, and cures them from the effects of injuries, overwork, etc.

Doctors agree that Asparagus is good for the kidneys, but no strong extract with all the medicinal properties had been prepared until Dr. Hobb prepared it from the roots by a special process of his own.

He found this so successful that he made it up into pills, with some few other ingredients, and used them in his private practice for years.

This was the origin of Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills.

French physicians of repute have carefully tested Asparagus in all kidney troubles, and consider it of great value.

Now the United States Health Reports, Vol. XXIV, No. 2, has this to say about Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills: "Dr. Dio Lewis said: Nineteen diseases out of twenty originate from diseased kidneys, and those who have made pathology a study will agree with this eminent physician that where the kidneys fail to perform their functions in any way the whole system becomes enervated and the body diseased. When the kidneys fail to perform their wanted task, effete and injurious matter is carried to all parts of the body. Through a mistaken diagnosis, these symptoms are often pronounced separate and distinct diseases, but as a matter of fact they can only be cured by remedies which reach and relieve the overworked kidneys and strengthen them, so that they can successfully act their part as cleansers of the body, thereby insuring regularity, strength and good health throughout the entire system."

"Among all the Remedies claiming to perform this much desired result, and which have been investigated by the compilers of these Reports, it has been found that while there was much to commend there was much to be desired. It is, therefore, with more than ordinary pleasure, after a most painstaking investigation, and a long and careful examination of the results achieved by the remedy, placed upon the market by the Hobb's Medicine Co., known as Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills, that we pronounce this preparation a kidney remedy par excellence, and one that will speedily and effectually cure all diseases of the kidneys, whatever their origin or name, or however chronic or deep seated they may be."

"During a quarter of a century of journalism, during which time we have exercised a watchful eye over many of the preparations having for their object the cure of kidney diseases, we have never come across a preparation of such merit as Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills. By eating Asparagus a slight effect is had on the kidneys, but the greater part of the curative property for the plants is not absorbed and goes to waste. The extract of Asparagus, however, as prepared by Dr. Hobb contains all the active curative elements so prepared that they are at once absorbed, and do their work of curing the kidneys without waste or loss."

Dr. Hobb's Sparagus Kidney Pills cure all kidney diseases and all blood diseases, such as Rheumatism Gout, Neuralgia, Anaemia, etc.

They will cure when other remedies will even relieve.

For sale by all druggists or mailed prepaid for 50 cents a box.

HE LOST FAITH.

From the Gazette, Baldwinville, N. Y.

The Gazette has advertised many remedies, but none which could not give satisfactory proof of being possessed of real merit. We made an investigation in regard to Pink Pills the other day, and at the instance of Gardner & Davis, druggists, interviewed Herbert Spencer. We never saw a stronger or more straightforward underment.

"As you know, I am now, and have been for years employed in the sash and blind factory of Bliss & Snyman. About twelve years ago I was attacked with rheumatism in my lower limbs, and it is impossible to describe my sufferings. I tried a number of physicians and countless advertised remedies, but if I obtained any relief it was only temporary. My feet were swollen so it was necessary to wear shoes several sizes too large, and then cut them open at that.

In going up and down stairs it was necessary to crawl. I kept at work most of the time and my wife would bring my dinner to the factory, as I was unable to walk home to the mid-day meal, although it was but a short distance away. I was almost discouraged, but had tried everything, and spent more money than I could afford with the hope that somewhere there might be relief. About this time my sister-in-law saw in a newspaper an account of a man at Galway, N. Y., whom it stated had been cured by a medicine known as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. As I had lost all faith in every remedy my sister-in-law, unknown to me, wrote to the man saying that she would try the medicine. She replied stating that it was not only true, but that the Pink Pills would do all that was claimed for them. I went at once to the drug store of Gardner & Davis and bought one box, following this with another. With the second box I began to improve, and continued the use of the medicine. I had taken twenty boxes when I was fully relieved of all rheumatic trouble. I would say that it is necessary to follow the directions meticulously. They must just what they say, and to get the best results with the Pink Pills you must do exactly as you are told."

Replying to the question as to whether he could recommend Pink Pills, Mr. Spencer said:

"Recommend them? Well, I guess I can recommend them. Why I suffered night and day beyond my powers to describe. I consider it the only remedy which is sure to cure rheumatism. I cannot too forcibly express my faith in Pink Pills for Pale People."

Knowing that Notary Public M. H. Smith was in his office, Mr. Spencer was asked if he would sign the above and make affidavit to its correctness, which he willingly consented to do, and his signature and the notary's are here appended. HERBERT SPENCER.

Harbor Notes.

The sloop Modoc, got ashore on the rocks of Great Chebeague island during the gale of Thursday, and yesterday Captain McNeill, the tug L. A. Belknap went down and pulled her off. The Modoc was loaded with vegetables, and her captain made the mistake of keeping a little too close in shore.

Not a single schooner arrived with fresh fish yesterday, and the dealers were wondering what they should do if the same state of things continued any length of time. It is something of a question where the schooners of the Portland fishing fleet are.

A number of schooners in port, tried to get out yesterday, but once outside, their captains didn't like the looks of the weather and they all returned to their anchorage. This holding of a wind bound fleet of schooners in the harbor is greatly helping out the Commercial street dealers.

Captain Norwood of the schooner Lilian, was trying yesterday, but without success up to a late hour, to find an anchor slot when his chains parted Thursday.

The Numidian is still taking loose grains. Twenty carloads of Canadian apples, and five carloads of Canadian cheese came in over the Grand Trunk yesterday, and will be added to her cargo.

Cumberland County Teachers Meet.

WHAT THE SCHOOLS OF MAINE NEED.

Remarks and Papers by Many Educators—The New Methods of Teaching—Interesting Sessions—Some Grammar School Methods attacked.

The Cumberland County Teachers' Association began its annual meeting at Lewis Hall, Woodfords, yesterday morning. President W. J. Cortwell presided, and there was a large attendance of teachers. State Superintendent of schools W. W. Stetson was present as the representative of the State.

The exercises were opened with prayer by Rev. E. P. Wilson, of Woodfords. The visiting teachers were welcomed to Deering, in the absence of Mayor Mitchell by Mr. A. S. Hinds, chairman of the Deering School committee.

President Cortwell responded for the association. He expressed the pleasure of all in meeting for a second time in Deering. The city had an enviable reputation for its corps of teachers; and if the grammar school course had not yet been expanded to include all branches of human knowledge, it nevertheless was probably true that the schools were doing excellent work for the future. The matter of education was making great progress in the towns between Gorham and Portland, as could be seen by watching the progress of the last fifteen years. Mr. Cortwell also congratulated the cities of Westbrook and Deering on being the first towns in Maine to set the example of cooperating in hiring a capable and accomplished man to devote his whole time to superintending the schools of the two places. All the towns of Maine must come to this system before the schools can do proper work.

The following committee was appointed on nominations: Mr. Charles E. Cobb, of the Forest street school in Westbrook, Mr. Gray, of Bridgton, and Miss Adams, of Portland.

On resolutions the following committee was reported: Messrs. Charles Fish, of Brunswick and F. E. C. Robbins, of Deering, and Miss Taylor, of Portland. The first subject for consideration was: "What are we doing to give to the pupils power of expression in good English, and to develop in them the love of reading good literature?"

Miss Abbie Norton, was introduced as a first kindergarten teacher in Portland. Miss Norton said that she could not claim that honor, which belonged to Miss Jennie D. Proctor, who introduced the system in 1874, and is now of Concord.

Miss Norton dwelt first upon the necessity of correct language training as the basis of good education. It is the aim of the kindergarten system to get a full, free expression of the life of the child, in the forms of culture. The child comes to the school with its abounding vitality and it is the aim of the school to encourage and not repress his activities. So far as much used. Then every Monday morning is devoted to stories of the home, when each little one relates some incident of the two days previous.

Miss Nellie Cloudman, of the Gorham training school next exemplified the particular ways in which the teacher encourages free and correct expression, not by correcting the child frequently, but by the gentle power of example.

Miss Hodson, of Yarmouth, next read a paper on primary grade work, describing the latest ideas in language work.

Miss Leland, of Leering, who does the kind of advanced teaching described by Miss Hodson, gave interesting details of the work in Deering.

Supt. F. E. C. Robbins spoke of the language work in the primary grades of Deering and Westbrook.

State Supt. of Schools, W. W. Stetson, was called upon. He said in visiting the schools of this State he had observed an attitude of formality on the part of students and teachers which was painful. The teacher was a czar and the pupils humble subjects. The great trouble of the schools today is that the scholar is in an unnatural position as to his body, and an uneasy condition as to his mind. A school should be run as the best homes are run. There should be a social atmosphere.

Rev. Mr. Hague, of Bridgton, spoke of the individual peculiarities of people in their methods of thought, and the question of order as applied to schools.

ATTACK ON GRAMMAR SCHOOL METHODS.

President Cortwell began the discussion of the subject: "Should the Grammar School Course be Broadened or Deened?" He said that it needs deepening, rather than broadening, and needs not a greater number of studies but a better understanding of those now in use. "My experience as teacher in secondary schools for twenty-four years has driven home this conviction."

Principal Crosby of the Deering High school was the next speaker upon this question. He said that it seemed to him that the High school teachers are between the upper and nether mill stones. They are between the grammar schools, which are about where they used to be, and the colleges which demand a much higher grade of fitting than formerly. However, he thought that the grammar school teachers had all they could well do now and the scholars when they came to the High school had acquired about all they were well able to. May it not be that the course in the grammar school expects a maturity of mind that the Creator did not intend. May be the scholars up in Massachusetts are born more advanced than they are here, but they don't do any better after they get into Congress.

He thought that certainly the grammar school course in geography here could not be very much deepened. Too much was now required in the grammar school. He was shown a geography lesson in Portland the other night "that was a shame and a disgrace to civilization to give to a child of that age."

"I don't think it was the teacher's fault. Probably the course in Portland demands just so much and the teacher had to give it and the scholars make a try at it."

If any of the geography might be laid aside, he thought it might be the political geography and perhaps more of the physical geography added.

In regard to his own High school, Superintendent Robbins brought an algebra last year that took much longer to go through thoroughly than they had expected. He felt sure that by the use of this algebra they could fit a scholar in that study for any college or school of technology in the country. Yet this algebra was intended for and is used by some of the grammar schools in Massachusetts. If we can use that algebra thoroughly in our grammar schools our children will have to be born more mature or else develop faster. It is possible that here in Maine we are born two years younger than they are in Massachusetts.

Superintendent Robbins asked if Mr. Crosby hadn't used a little stronger expression than he intended when he had said that in arithmetic and grammar there was an utter failure in our grammar schools. Mr. Crosby said that he did not intend to convey that impression. He meant that along certain lines; and with the average scholar there was utter failure. He called upon Miss Perry who teaches English at the Deering High school to give her opinion.

Miss Perry said: "Speaking of my present class I should say there would be almost utter failure," meaning in their grasp of grammar as acquired in the grammar school.

Superintendent Robbins wished to know along just what lines was this complete and utter failure. He said that it was the tendency to shift responsibility upon the schools of the lower grades. Mr. Crosby said that if he seemed to criticize any teacher he should be misunderstood. "They fail, I mean, along these lines. The average scholar that comes to the High school has no power to analyze an English sentence of moderate difficulty. I mean that participial and infinitive phrases are utterly unknown to them. They have as good an idea of the anatomy of a new as of the handling of a participial phrase. Do I put that too strongly, Miss Perry?"

Miss Perry thought that he didn't. Mr. Crosby said that no knowledge of the accusative is had. "The whole adverbial accusative is utter terra incognita."

"Would that apply to your present class, Miss Perry?"

"It would most decidedly."

"I think that along those lines there is utter failure in the case of the average scholar," concluded Mr. Crosby.

Mr. Cortwell wished to say a word or two on the grammar question. He might be called crazy on that subject, he said. He had been teaching grammar for sixteen years. He had had secondary classes and also 57 per cent of his scholars were from the High schools.

"They are incapable of the analysis of a complex English sentence or to point out the causal relations so as to indicate the meaning."

"Why should they be anything else," asked somebody. Mr. Cortwell said that he had been also teaching psychology and would have had just as much reason to expect them to have grasped the real science of grammar. Nineteen-twentieths of the scholars that come to him "fall flat over every single passive participle that they come to. Well it's difficult. I suggest that we are mistaken in a serious manner."

The analysis of English sentences, the technical English grammar, is beyond the natural power of the child."

Applause and cries of "that's so." "I know I'm a heretic. I rejoice in it. I was born of a heretical race," continued Mr. Cortwell and then criticized the present method of teaching grammar as a preparation for the understanding of Latin. "We've gone too far in giving little elementary facts and expecting the scholars to grasp the science," said he. At this point the session adjourned till the afternoon.

THE AFTERNOON SESSION.

There was a large increase of attendance in the afternoon and Lewis hall was crowded, so that some had to stand. The first paper was by

of Portland, a training school teacher, who described many of her methods in teaching her pupils expression of good

your child

You note the difference in children. Some have nearly every ailment, even with the best of care. Others far more exposed pass through unharmed. Weak children will have continuous colds in winter, poor digestion in summer. They are without power to resist disease, they have no reserve strength. Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil, with hypophosphites, is cod-liver oil partly digested and adapted to the weaker digestions of children.

English and the love of reading good literature. Among other things, she said that children constantly fall in the use of irregular verbs. She seeks to correct this by personal conversation with the pupil, involving the use of different tests in the same sentence, also the blackboard is largely used for the same purpose.

The proper use of adverbs is taught by illustration, by causing the pupil to perform some act and then to state how he did it, whether softly, loudly, skillfully, etc. These are but few illustrations of the many interesting methods described. In regard to teaching a class good reading, Miss Kenney said that she has as her programme, ten minutes each day devoted to the memorizing of gems of thought, especially selected from our American poets, selected somewhat for their suitability to the time of year.

MR. WENTWORTH OF WESTBROOK grammar school continued the discussion of the subject. He said that in giving a pupil power of expression he would use that word, in the case of his own pupils, simply as causing him to disclose how and what he thinks. He emphasized the importance of the selection of a reading lesson. One of his methods was to have the pupil read the selection silently and then describe what they had read. He had found that they liked to do this. One reason was because he selected for them readable articles. This course aims to secure thought and then oral expression. He described his methods of teaching spelling and had a good deal to say about the teaching of grammar in the same lines as the discussion of the forenoon.

In regard to composition he said that he would not assign a subject in which he could not get a rank of seventy himself, such as "Astronomy," "Love of the Beautiful," etc., but subjects within the experience and comprehension of the pupil.

It had been his custom to be watchful and have his pupils watchful of mistakes of grammar in the school room the pupil being expected to call attention to such a mistake if noticed. He said that by the above methods he secured better results than he had formerly done. The subject was then open for general discussion and MR. PARMENTER OF PORTLAND North school was called upon. He said that the subject was of the greatest importance, because the use of language is something that the pupil needs every day of his life. This is not true of the other school studies. In the North school he said that the teachers were not all using the same methods in the teaching of language, also they were tied down somewhat to their text books, which are different, and more so than he thought was best.

He had noticed that pupils coming to the grammar grades were very deficient in their use of language. Why are they forgetting the use of the punctuation marks? He believed that these things should be taught thoroughly in the primary schools. In regard to the teaching of language in the public schools he thought that the work was not as clearly laid out as in the case of other studies. He believed that the teacher should be just as particular to see that the period and comma be used correctly, as that the decimal point should be. This, they are trying to do at the North school. He knew that his teachers were careful to guard their pupils, use of correct language and also aware that more important still is their own use of correct language. Also they make an important feature that all the scholars shall provide themselves with dictionaries.

continued the subject. He said that no one denies that the study of technical grammar has a disciplinary value, but this is not sufficient. Some other benefit must be derived from this study or it will not retain its place in the public school. But he believed that the science of language contains the only key to correct expression. He had found that the knowledge of the science leads to correct expression. When pupils are exercised much in expanding and contracting changing participles to infinitives, etc., they become able to use the sentence correctly.

"This school, they begin with the study of the science and end with the study of the sentence. The ability to use the parts of speech depends upon the comprehension of the sentence."

When six years of age, the child begins the construction of the sentence. The analysis of the sentence comes next. The predicate is taught first and the verb at the same time. The predicate once learned, the subject is readily known. The verb phrase must be carefully taught. All the parts of speech are developed from the sentence. The preposition is learned from the phrase, not the reverse.

Mr. Dole very fully outlined further the development of this method of teaching grammar.

REV. MR. HOGUE,

superintendent of schools in Bridgton, spoke of the study of grammar in the ungraded schools in his town. He said they were doing something to teach correct pronunciation. He spoke of it as a task of much magnitude and labor.

They are also making a beginning towards the use of correct grammatical forms. Some care is taken to have the teachers pay constant attention to the pupils language and to call attention to mistakes.

He thought that some Bridgton scholar might criticize the expression of one of the speakers of the day when he said that certain "ideas should soak and lay in the mind." He might have meant that they should hatch out a new brood, in which case it was, perhaps, appropriate, but was certainly "a highly figurative and somewhat a mythological expression."

Mr. Hauge spoke further of selections for reading.

THE REV. MR. PARSON

of Auburn read a paper upon the subject of "Books and Reading." He said that it seemed appropriate to the occasion because of the fact that teachers are too much inclined to limit their reading to subjects especially bearing upon their work. He declared that people who "have no time for reading" generally find time for something else which they like. It is a matter of inclination, not of time. The greatest readers have been the busiest men. Books are so cheap now that lack of funds can never account for not reading. He believed that the chief reason why more people do not read was because they had not formed the habit. It is as much habit, as is parting your hair on one side. He declared that he had a carpenter in his congregation, seventy-five years old, who reads more than any lawyer in his congregation. He declared that there is no other resource or recreation for man comparable to reading. He developed this idea at some length and dwelt upon the importance of forming the reading habit. He thought that constant reading of good authors would give a better command of language than any study of technical grammar. But how teach the boy this love of reading? First let him read what he likes to read. His own experience as a boy was that nothing could keep him from the fascination of the yellow dime novel. But finally he awoke to the fact that he had worked that mine through. When he realized that he could tell the end by the beginning, he had no further interest. If a boy's mind never seeks, of its own accord, anything higher than the dime novel, no outside power can make it.

Mr. Parsons' paper was very bright and interesting, and caused much enjoyment and amusement, though many did not agree with parts of it.

THE EVENING SESSION

The evening session was devoted to the "Question Box," an address by Superintendent Stetson and an informal reception.

Mr. Stetson's subject was "Teachers and the Lessons They Teach." His address was devoted to personal reminiscences of his acquaintance with Grant, Sherman, Goff, Spurgeon, Gladstone and Billings. These reminiscences were of very much interest and were thoroughly enjoyed by the audience.

TODAY'S PROGRAMME.

The programme for today will be as follows:

9.00 a.m. — Reports of Committees and Election of Officers. In High Schools, Principals Crosby, Moore and others. General Discussion. Teaching English, Prof. Roberts. General Discussion. Questions for discussion forwarded to the Executive Committee—Is Some Change in the Country Association Desirable? Should Arithmetic be taught Analytically or by Rules? Should the Grammar School Course be Broadened or Deepened? Is Mr. Rice right in saying "Lessons Should be Taught before They are Studied"? What is the Value of the Method of Formulas in Teaching Arithmetic?

FOOTBALL NOTES.

Something About Today's Game—Other News and Notes.

Apparently the game between Portland and Hebron today will have to be played in the snow, if the promises of last evening is fulfilled. That will make it all the more comfortable for the players, but much less so for the spectators. Coach Morse speaks very encouragingly of the Portland team, saying that some of their offensive plays are remarkably good, speaking from a standpoint of comparison with the big teams of the country. Our weak point has been in the defensive work. When we have the ball we are pretty sure to do good work with it, but when we have lost it we have suffered more than the usual calamity. However, in practice this week, the boys have shown up better than usual. The other day with the first eleven's backs to help them, the second eleven could not get a touchdown from the first in a half hour's continuous effort. Mr. Morse thought that this was an excellent showing.

The Hebron team has an excellent reputation for gentlemanly conduct on the gridiron. In fact Hebron has always played a clean game. Although the prospect is that Hebron will not have much chance for victory, yet there is no doubt that the game will be a splendid exhibition and a lively contest. Among the Hebron players are several stars. Barnhomer and Doty at right end and right tackle compare very favorably with Devine and Allen, and they are among the best in the state. Maxim at right guard is a tower of strength for Hebron. He is especially valuable in offensive work. Thompson at centre, is also a good man. These men will make things interesting, even if the team, as a whole, is not so strong as Portland.

Other games today are Berwick Academy vs. Kennebunk at South Berwick; Thornton Academy vs. Kent's Hill at Saco.

At Gardiner, Thursday, the local High school and Cony High school eleven's played a close and exciting game, neither side scoring.

L. T. Patterson of the Colby team is partially recovered from his injury received in the Bowdoin game and is coaching the Institutes in preparation for their game with the High schools on Thanksgiving day.

The Waterville correspondent of the Kennebec Journal complains as follows: "The management of the Waterville High school football team is indignant at the treatment it has received this season from the Gardiner team. Already three games have been arranged, and in each case Gardiner, has for some reason or other, cancelled the dates. In one instance it was claimed that the team had disbanded but the very next week it played a tie game with Cony High at Augusta. The cancellation of the other dates was done for what appeared to be similar useless reasons. Several days ago Manager Small wrote Manager Ames for a date, but has received no reply whatever, yet it is understood that the Gardiner team is endeavoring to fix a date with the Monmouth academy team. Waterville will claim all three of the games."

Manager Small and the members of the Waterville High school football team have made overtures for the Bangor-Portland game to be played in that city. They promise to have the grounds properly roped off and freshly lined, beside other inducements, and they hope that if the game is played at all, it will be played there.

Let us have it played there if we cannot trust to the crowds in either Bangor or Portland.

Indoor Rifle Practice.

The members of the Miles Standish Rifle club are requested to meet at the store of the Lovell Arms Company, 150 Middle street, at eight o'clock, this evening. Quarters have been secured and shooting will probably begin next week. This is an indoor shooting club, and will only rifle practice all this winter as it did last. Their quarters are at number seventeen Cross street. They shoot at a range of seventy-five feet and use a reduced ring German target. There will be a number of prizes and they will belong next spring to the ten men having the best scores.

Faderewski Recitals.

To the Editor of the Press: The great Faderewski has come and gone.

There is no denying that he is one of the musical marvels of the age; his execution and technique are simply phenomenal and his touch is perhaps best described as poetic.

Two brilliant audiences greeted the renowned pianist, and it is to be presumed they enjoyed the recitals; but only an exceedingly small proportion of the audiences really comprehended what they were listening to. The fact that a master hand controlled the instrument was evident to all, but the fact was also evident that Faderewski played vastly over the heads of his hearers. Had his programme contained numbers like the Mendelssohn Wedding March, Soldiers'

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 23.

The orders of the Sultan to the authorities in Eastern Turkey are all that could be desired. If there are the disposition and ability to execute them they will restore order, but of this there is the gravest doubt.

President Debs's term of imprisonment has expired and he has been released. He has had a long time to meditate upon his last year's venture at holding up the business of the country, and it is to be hoped that with meditation has come the conviction that it wasn't profitable enough to try to repeat.

Secretary Morton has now blossomed out as a great friend of civil service reform, and is proposing that the classified service be still further extended. If the members of the cabinet had manifested their zeal for civil service reform earlier when it was not so certain as it is now that there was to be a change of administration they would have got more credit for sincerity than they will now, and deserved more, too.

If ex-consul Waller's trial and sentence were according to the French law—and it is said that Secretary Olney has found such to be the case—then there is no ground on which we can interfere. American citizens who see fit to live abroad must conform to the laws of the country and if an accusation is brought against them all they can ask is that they shall be tried by the law of the country to which they have voluntarily come to live in. His American citizenship gives him no special privileges. Of course the country of which he is a citizen may use its good offices in his behalf, but it can demand nothing as a matter of right after it is ascertained that he was tried in accordance with the laws of the country in which he is residing. Mr. Waller can claim no protection from the United States now that the proceedings in his case have been found to be regular, so the wise thing for him would seem to be to accept what France is willing to give him, if he will waive all claim for indemnity, his freedom.

In opening the session of the Cumberland County Educational Society yesterday, Principal W. F. Corbitt referred to Deering and Westbrook as being the first municipalities in the State to unite in hiring a superintendent to devote his whole time to their schools. Mr. Corbitt declared that this system ought to be extended to all the towns in Maine, and would have to be before the schools in the country regions especially could be made to do the work which they should do. Mr. Corbitt undoubtedly hit upon a great defect in our school system. The abolition of the district system has been a step in advance; but more efficient superintendence is needed even more. The present system, utilizing as committee men persons picked up in the tumultuous choice of town meetings, may give generally good business men, of practical sense. But they are generally not particularly trained in matters of education. The supervision of the real school work on their part is merely perfunctory. It must necessarily be so, for they cannot afford the time needed. But two or three towns, by clubbing together, could at a moderate expense to each, hire an educated, trained man, who should give all his time to caring for the schools of those towns. We believe that the results of such a system would be most favorable. Massachusetts applies it successfully. It is understood that this is one of the reforms that State Superintendent Stetson has in mind; and it is to be hoped that he will be successful.

THE BUTLER SCHOOL.

When the Board of Health first examined the Butler school it reported that certain things ought to be done, and that if these things were done then all possible danger would be removed. The committee on public buildings adopted the report and proceeded to make the changes and repairs suggested. Subsequently new demands were made by some of the parents who have children at the school, and the Board of Health reported in favor of having these things done also, not that it believed them necessary to protect the health of the scholars, but simply because they were desirable on other grounds and were demanded by some of the residents. To accomplish the changes which the Board deem necessary to protect the health of the children will require but a short time, but to make all the changes suggested in the second report will take a very long time, especially as we must wait several weeks before they can be begun, inasmuch as the expert who has been summoned cannot come before that time has expired. Now there are a great many people in this district who do not share in the alarm that has been created largely by the hearing at the school the other day, and who believe that if the changes which were originally suggested by the Board of Health are made the school will be perfectly safe; and they object to having the school closed for an indefinite period and their children either sent away or to other school houses, the sanitary condition of which is much more questionable than that of the Butler school, or debarred from all school privileges for many weeks to come. They say that the alarm of a few people, which they believe is based on no sound reason, should not be allowed to control, and shut up that school for a long period. They believe that the alarmists are in a very small minority and they say that no injustice will be done them by keeping the school open inasmuch as they need not send their children to the school if they do not choose to.

There is great force in these representations. School houses are built for public education and nobody has a right to shut them up unless some emergency has arisen which imperatively demands it. The Board of Health has once testified that there was no necessity to close this school except for a few days to make some repairs upon the soil pipe, and though it has made some additional recommendations since it has neither changed nor withdrawn this opinion. If the school is closed to meet demands made by a small minority of residents of the district for changes which the Board of Health, composed of experienced men, has said are not needed to insure the safety of the scholars. It seems to us that a sufficient case is not made out to justify the closing of this school any longer than is necessary to make the changes deemed essential by the Board of Health for the health of the children. Other changes can wait until vacation.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

From the Black Sea through Persia and India. By Edwin Lord Weeks. This very interesting work is the itinerary of a painter who records his visual impressions of all that is beautiful or effective, and his mental impressions of tribal, municipal, and economic conditions. He starts from Trebizond for Tabreez over the oldest caravan route in the world. Human models furnish him abundant material for his pencil: Kurds, with their fiery horses; ruddy Tartars with majestic camels, whose heads carry masses of tassels and bells; Turkish infantry; veiled women; turbaned mullahs; fierce old Persians with shaggy eyebrows and gray beard dyed flaming orange and scarlet; gray-skirted Georgian shepherds with red pipes; martial Sikhs and Gorkhas, handsome and uniformed; shy birute Afghans; Hindoo priests and Indian fakirs aloft. He sees a wealth of architectural material: ancient Byzantine citadels, caravanserais with clay walls and cell rooms; mosques with slender minarets; ruined palaces with silver doors and exquisite loggias; mud-houses and bungalows. He gives a glowing description of the gorgeous coloring of an Eastern morning and describes the bazaars of world-famous Teheran, and gives his impressions of Isfahan with its ruins of magnificent palaces and gateways, pathetic souvenirs of the days when it was the seat of the world's most sumptuous court. An interesting and exhaustive analysis of the Punajab infantry is given, and an amusing description of Indian railway travel and its sequels. There are notes on Indian art and the folk of India is considered. This volume is printed in large clear type on fine satin paper, and the one hundred and thirty-four very effective illustrations are by the author. (New York: Harper & Brothers; Portland: Loring, Short & Harmon.)

Notes in Japan. By Alfred Parsons. This work is divided into six chapters, which are: The Japanese Spring, Early Summer in Japan, The Time of the Lotus, Fruits, Autumn in Japan, Some Wanderings in Japan. All works on Japan treat of the art of the race, and Mr. Parsons's Notes apart from their intrinsic worth, are of especial value in giving the criticisms on this art of a distinguished painter of another school. Notes in Japan is in every way a very interesting and beautiful book. It is attractively written, showing the natural beauty of Japan and many of the customs of its people, not only by graceful and vivid descriptions, but by exquisite illustrations on every other page from the author's pictures and sketches. It is nicely printed on rich paper, with wide margins and is tastefully bound. (New York: Harper & Brothers; Portland: Loring, Short & Harmon.)

Young Master Kirke. By Penn Shirley, author of Little Miss Weezy Series. Illustrated. (Boston: Lee & Shepard; Portland: Loring, Short & Harmon.) All the young folks will remember the "Miss Weezy Stories," by Penn Shirley, who is a sister of Sophie May, and shares with her sister in a genius for interesting the children. All of the Rowe family appear in the new volume. Although somewhat older, the children are still full of life, vigor, and fun. The scene is laid in a new and interesting country, the family being located on the Pacific coast, where the surroundings are so different from their Massachusetts home, and where they find unlimited opportunities for new and varied experiences. Kirke, the hero of the story, still retains his impetuosity and faculty for getting into trouble, while Weezy continues her bright and funny remarks. In their new abode they make many pleasant acquaintances, and the narrative of their sayings and doings is one of the best the author has written. (Price 75 cents.)

Half Round the World. By Oliver Optic. Illustrated. (Boston: Lee & Shepard; Portland: Loring, Short & Harmon. Price, $1.25.) As indicated in the general title, it is the author's intention to conduct the readers of this entertaining series, "around the world." As a means to this end, the hero of the story Louis Belgrave, a young millionaire, purchases a steamer which he names "The Guardian Mother," and with a number of guests she proceeds on her voyage. In the present volume the vessel sails from the Nippon Islands to Rangoon, down the coast of Burma and the Malay Peninsula to the islands of Sumatra, Java, and Borneo. A space on the promenade deck had been fitted up as a conference room in which matters of interest were discussed and much information imparted in regard to the countries visited. While conveying this useful knowledge, Mr. Adams never loses sight of the fact that the young people expect from him an interesting story, full of exciting incidents, and this element is supplied by the adventures of the few young men of the party on the vessel as well as at the various points visited.

PERSONAL AND PECULIAR.

Mrs. Belva A. Lockwood lectured in the auditorium of the Atlanta exposition the other day on "The New Woman;" and in the course of her address said: "The new woman is here to stay. The next innovation will be the new man. He has been needed in the world for a long time. Let us welcome the new man and pray that his life may have righteousness for its foundation and truth for its corner stone."

In a recent lecture on the progress of the telephone in Germany State Secretary Dr. Stephan said that the number of towns joined by telephone has now reached 434, with 109,960 subscribers. The daily average of conversations held in Berlin is 410,000. Hamburg has nearly 11,000 subscribers. This year, as is known by telephone communication with Vienna and Copenhagen was opened. The former line is 418 miles in length, the other about 500 miles, with 18 miles of submarine cable.

According to a Paris paper the crown of the King of Portugal, which was recently repaired by a jeweler, is the most costly in the world being valued at $5,000,000.

An Old New England Town. Sketches of life, scenery, character, by Frank Samuel Child, with illustrations. A steel engraving of Judge Roger M. Sherman, house-etchings of streets, old colonial houses, sweeping elms and of country or shore, and an old print, dated 1778, of court house, church and jail, constitute the illustrations of this volume which is a handsome one, well gotten up.

The book was compiled from lectures delivered by the author, in response to the invitation of a chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and is dedicated to "The Eunice Dannie Burr Chapter." The writer hopes to awaken patriotism anew by his contribution to colonial literature. Certainly he has succeeded in completing an interesting, vivacious and thoroughly readable book. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons; Portland: Loring, Short & Harmon. Price $2.00.

A Colonial Wooling by Charles Conrad Abbott, M. D., author of "The Birds About Us," "Recent Rambles," etc., is as fresh and pretty a story as one would ask and into it has crept the very spirit of its heroine, who has an independent resolution of her own by no means to be daunted. Here, in its early pages, we find an illustration of the fact that the plucky of the Friends does not always prevent an eye to business;—one-fifth day morning, Mahlon Stacy, hearing a loud clap of thunder, while at meeting, was heard to mutter audibly, "Tut-tut-tut! my hay." There is a dictatorial interference in this which we think especially dignified. The picture throughout of 1665 and thereafter is excellent and the unaffected style of the story commands itself. While it makes no pretence to being more than an agreeable bit of romance it gives one a pleasant look at the old days and old ways, which the author offers, are, after all, very like our own in animus, if not in outward form. Philadelphia, J. B. Lippincott Company; Portland: Loring, Short & Harmon. Price $1.00.

The Right Honorable W. E. Gladstone, a study from life, by Henry W. Lucy, author of a Diary of Two Parliaments. The first two chapters of this work treat of Mr. Gladstone's boyhood and his kind folk, and the early reminiscences related show his wonderful memory, as well as the great changes that have taken place in Liverpool, where he was born in December, 1809. It was his good fortune, the writer says, to be within hearing of all the important speeches made by Mr. Gladstone in Parliament and beyond its doors during the last twenty years. On account of the superabundance of material and the difficulty of getting it within the limits of his volume, "I have been content," the author says, "rapidly to sketch in chronological order, the main course of a phenomenally busy life," enriching the narrative wherever possible with autobiographical scraps to be found in the library of Mr. Gladstone's public speeches, supplementing it by personal notes made over a period of twenty years. The book contains a portrait of Mr. Gladstone. Boston, Roberts Brothers; Portland: Loring, Short & Harmon.

Prince Bismarck, by Charles Lowe, M. A., author of Alexander III. of Russia, etc. In his preface of this interesting work, the author says: "Since the appearance of my large two volume work,

Two Little Children Made Strong and Well by Dr. Greene's Nervura.

The Mother Also Restored to Health by That Grandest of All Medicines, Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy.

Strong, vigorous and healthy children are what we all want, and how to keep our little ones in good health is a question of the greatest interest to us all. Children are peculiarly liable to nervous disorders; they become nervous, restless, fretful, cross and irritable; their night sleep is not calm and restful, but they turn restlessly from side to side, murmur of talk in their sleep and wake tired and unrefreshed in the morning. They have an irregular appetite, grow thin and orate the entire system, restoring a healthful color to the cheek, refreshing sleep, strong nerves, stout limbs and that bounding health and vitality, which all children should have. It is perfectly safe to give to children of any age, and its curative and restorative effects are wonderful.

Mrs. H. Silver, of 149 Lewis St., New York City, was not only restored herself to health by Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, but her two children, whose portraits are here given, were made strong and well by this grand medicine. Mrs. Silver says:—

"I was nervous for four years so that I could do nothing. I went to different doctors, but none could help me. I read so much in the papers about Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy that I thought I would try it. After the first bottle I felt relieved, so I used a couple of bottles more and now I am all right again. I thank Dr. Greene's Nervura for the good it did me."

"I also have two little girls who were sick, weak and run-down, to whom I gave Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. It did them so much good that I cannot be thankful enough. It made them well and strong again, and they are now, thanks to this wonderful remedy, healthy and vigorous. Before I took Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy I could not eat or sleep. I could not do my housework, but now I am like a different woman. I give this testimonial that other sufferers may read it and know the good Nervura did me and my children."

Use Dr. Greene's Nervura in all nervous diseases of infants and children, and see them improve in health and strength every day and hour. It is not a patent medicine, but the prescription of the most successful living specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases. Dr. Greene, of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., has the largest practice in the world, and his grand medical discovery is the result of his vast experience. The great reputation of Dr. Greene is guaranteed that his medicine will cure, and the fact that he can be consulted by anyone at any time free of charge, either personally or by letter, gives absolute assurance of the beneficial action of this wonderful medicine.

The Sorrows

Or, The Strange Experience of One
Geoffrey Tempest, Millionaire,
With Frontispiece by Van Schaick, Large
12mo, Buckram, $1.50.

The announcement of a new novel from the pen of Marie Corelli may easily be termed the most important of the present year. The author has been busily engaged upon the work ever since the publication and consequent enormous success of her last novel, "Barabbas," now in its twenty-fifth thousand, and replies very strongly to the critics of that book. The story turns upon the incarnation of Satan in human form and in modern society, and Miss Corelli shows her ability to handle the burning questions of the day in a masterly manner. A Novel by Elizabeth Phipp & Train, A SOCIAL HIGHWAYMAN.

By the author of "The Autobiography of a Professional Beauty," Illustrated, 16mo. Cloth, 75 cents.

The publication of this story in the July number of Lippincott's Magazine, and the consequent dramatization and production of the play, has created a demand for the story that has urged its publication in a new book form.

A Novel by Owen Hall,
THE TRACK OF A STORM.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

Paderewski.

An audience of about the same size as the one of Thursday night, gathered in City Hall at the matinee yesterday. The ladies largely predominated as was natural. The attendance from out of town, was much larger than that from the city proper. Owing to the time of the departure of the trains many were compelled to leave the hall before the close of the concert.

It may be said that Mr. Paderewski's playing was even more enjoyable than at the Thursday concert. The artist explains this by the statement that he can do better work at the matinee than in the evening. He feels that his audiences are more in rapport with him. There were peculiar conditions too, about yesterday's matinee. For the first hour no artificial light was employed, and it seemed as if one was sitting in the twilight, the figure of the pianist just discernable in the dusk, and the character of the music, for the most part, of the sort that so entrances one when heard in the gloaming of a summer evening. The large audience sat as quiet almost as statues until a number was ended when they broke forth in loud applause.

The Schumann sonata was perfectly played and Paderewski gave it an interpretation that was a revelation.

The Chopin selections were rendered as he, almost alone of pianists, can render them. His Legende was a bit of a music narrative full of romantic incidents. The melody of the Legende is full of feeling, while the composition ends brilliantly.

A number that was exceedingly odd was Rubenstein's study on false notes. In this selection the idea to be expressed is in the nature of a musical joke. It is thus described: The first part of the piece is composed of a series of arpeggios upward and arpeggios-like passages downward in each measure and the direction is afterwards reversed. The arpeggio ends not immediately upon the proper note of the chord, but reaches it from an accented appoggiatura a semi-tone lower. This, with the fact that the downward passage that follows, does not represent any real chord, but consists of a tonic or dominant arpeggio with the insertion of certain additional tones, carries out the composer's idea of constantly striking false notes.

Mr. Paderewski repeated one of the selections yesterday on a persistent encore, and for another encore gave his minute. After the concert he was thanked by many of the ladies, and to several of them gave his photographs.

The Watson Sisters.

The Portland Theatre was crowded last evening, up stairs and down, by an audience that shouted and applauded, and was evidently delighted. One of the prettiest acts, as we said yesterday, that has been seen on a Portland stage, was the trapeze act of the Watson Sisters and Senior Juan Zamora encircled by the electric lights. These gymnasts are all very skilful, and the fact that Miss May Watson supports her sister and Senior Zamora at arms length, proves her wonderful strength. The last performance will be given this evening.

Cissy Fitzgerald.

Of course Cissy Fitzgerald was the bright particular star in the role of the tricky little Maybud at the Park, Boston. The name describes her to the letter. Nothing more tricksome than the famous wink has ever been allowed at large, and the fair Cissy herself, with her sunny hair and her moonday smile and her rose-colored gown, in the personification of maybuds and springtime generally. (She is not the most wonderful dancer in the world, though there are few who excel her in fluffiness, but she is evidently having such a perfectly splendid time doing everything she does that it would be utterly unsympathetic not to have a splendid time, too. Cissy Fitzgerald is a not to be criticized. She is unique and the usual "implements of decision" are clumsy for the task. Cissy will be seen here at City hall shortly.

Waite Comedy Co.

Few theatrical managers appreciate the value of absolutely clean amusements. There are dozens of plays which are strong in plot and action, but which, through some little suggestive features, are not acceptable to thousands of amusement seekers. James R. Waite is one of the successful managers who have made a bold stand for the purest and best in comedy and drama, and as a result of his highly creditable discrimination, in every city in which his company appears, hundreds are seen in attendance who on no other occasion darken the door of a theatre. In addition to the regular theatrical patronage he draws that part of the public that so generously supported the "Old Homestead," "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "Hazel Kirke," and similar moral plays. The Waite Comedy Co. commences a two weeks engagement at the Portland Theatre on Monday evening in a sparkling new comedy. The daily matinees, which commence on Tuesday, afford high class entertainment for the ladies and children at a very trifling expense.

Fox and Ward's Minstrels.

The Lowell Citizen says: "Fox and Ward's Minstrels do not pretend to be the greatest show on earth, but it is a good company for all that. As a matter of fact the minstrels gave a capital performance at Music Hall last night, which was greatly enjoyed by a large audience." They appear at City Hall, Thanksgiving afternoon and evening. Seats on sale at Chandler's Music Store this morning, Nov. 23, at 9 o'clock.

The Park.

The last opportunities to see the excellent bill at the Park Theatre will be afforded this afternoon and evening when there should be big houses, Keating and Harris are among the best in their line on the vaudeville stage, and the other members of the company are always recognized by hearty applause.

Everybody knows Morton's delicious Bon Bons and Chocolates. These goods will be made fresh (while you wait) at Geo. C. Shaw & Co.'s store Saturday afternoon.

FIFTY-TWO YEARS OLD.

A Pleasantly Informal Celebration by Ligon Lodge Last Evening.

The fifty-second anniversary of the organization of Ligon lodge, No. 5, I. O. of O. F., was duly celebrated last evening, and was as charmingly informal as well could be arranged. The reception committee consisted of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Walker, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Cliallart and Mr. and Mrs. James A. Martin, while William E. Plummer, Nathan E. Reddon, Daniel Brooks, Walter T. Foss, William E. Carter, and Howard A. Fogg, acted as the committee of arrangements, and worked hard to ensure a celebration at once pleasantly unique, and entirely informal and succeeded perfectly in every detail.

For thirty minutes there was a reception given by Noble Grand W. Edwin Ulmer, Vice Grand Walter H. Brown, and Recording Secretary H. K. Colesworth. Then music, singing and conversation followed. There was no set programme, but the committee tried to draw out their best talent, and the result was such as to fully justify their wisdom in attempting to take from the celebration every formal feature.

Punch was served by Annie M. Clough, Emma A. Allen, Mildred Sawyer, Ella Hovey, Eva Colesworth, Mattie Colesworth, Eleanor Tewkesbury, Madeline Files, Lizzie L. Hovey and Angie M. Leighton. The ice cream was furnished by Thomas J. Briggs, and was served by Walter Webster and Edward Jordan.

The attendance was large, and shows the interest taken by the members of the lodge in the annual birthday celebration. Among those present may be mentioned Mr. and Mrs. William Cooper of Rockland, who came here in order to be present at the celebration. Mr. Cooper is a member of the lodge, and while at present a resident of Rockland has lost none of his former interest in his lodge. It is needless to say that he received a warm welcome.

It was a happy party, and there was a decided disposition to linger to the last. The main hall presented a very animated and charming picture. Ladies filled the chairs and the officers and members tried their best to make the evening a success. "The brightest and best celebration ever held by the lodge," was the universal verdict.

Silver Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Harmon celebrated their silver wedding last evening at their residence on Free street. Mr. Harmon is the well-known florist on Congress street. The house was handsomely decorated with rare plants and flowers, and a large party gathered to do honor to the occasion. Mr. and Mrs. Harmon were the recipients of many beautiful gifts. It was a delightful affair.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT.

Monson Hayes Carried Over the Deadly Shaft.

Survived His Injuries One Hour—Leaves a Young Widow—A Case of Unusual Sadness.

A catastrophe occurred in this city yesterday that demands universal sympathy for the victims of it. Monson Hayes was a young man 24 years old, who worked in the machine shop of the Portland & Rochester railroad. Last evening at about 6 o'clock he was in the act of hanging up his overalls, preparatory to going home, when his coat was caught in a belt and he was whirled up over the shafting above the boiler. When finally released from the terrible shaft, he was in a most shocking condition. His skull was fractured and his right collar bone and both legs were broken and his whole body was a mass of bruises. He was also injured internally. Dr. Warren was sent for and Rich's ambulance conveyed the poor fellow to the Maine General Hospital. He was conscious, but died at 7 o'clock, having survived his injuries only an hour.

He leaves a widow. They resided with his brother-in-law, John F. Eldridge, at 41 Anderson street. When he didn't come home to supper, Mr. Eldridge went out to look for him, and of course learned the terrible news. After Hayes's death he couldn't summon courage to go home and tell the young widow, who was waiting for her husband, all unconscious of any calamity, and who only about to become a mother. Mr. Eldridge was affected to tears by the sadness of the situation, tears that did him credit, for seldom does the misfortune fall to the lot of any man to be the bearer of such ill news under such distressing circumstances.

JUMPED INTO THE DOCK.

A Drunkard's Attempt to End His Life—A Man With a Bad and Sad Rum Record.

Dennis McCarthy is a man about thirty-five years old and has a bad record at the police station for drunkenness and disturbance and various minor offenses. Last evening at about six o'clock he was rescued from the icy water in the dock at Franklin wharf by some of the stevedores. He was intoxicated. The police wagon was sent for and McCarthy told Turnkey Emery that his brother had turned him out of doors and he was tired of living, and therefore he concluded to jump into the dock and drown himself. There seems to be no doubt but that it was an attempt at suicide. Rum has been McCarthy's evil companion for so long that the fellow evidently took the only means to get rid of it.

McCarthy is the same man who fell over Fort Allen park on to the Grand Trunk tracks last year, and was taken to the hospital and recovered. Apparently the Devil of Rum is determined not to lose its victim in this instance, despite all the attempts of the Angle of Death to get possession of him.

The Department Called Out.

The alarm from box 43 yesterday morning, about 10 o'clock, was caused by the bursting of a valve of the boiler at H. H. Nevens's, wholesale dealer in spoons, No. 398 Fore street. The valve led to the steam gauge and the escaping steam rushed from the upper windows, and led to the impression that the building was on fire. The spool stock was but slightly damaged by the leaking of the water, as the goods are protected by tin or wooden boxes. The loss will not exceed $100.

A WILD MAN

Captured at Seabro by Constable Moulton Yesterday.

He Had Cats Skinned and Dressed for Cooking—Nearly Set the Barn of George Knight Afire.

Coal Kiln Corner had a wild man in its vicinity the past week and yesterday he was captured, wherein this case is different from that of the ordinary wild man who is reported from time to time as lurking in the woods near some peaceful hamlet. During the last few days, the man has been seen by a number of people who have had occasion to pass over the roads near Coal Kiln Corner. Much of this region is heavily wooded and it has been in these woods that the man has apparently spent his time, probably seeking the shelter of barns during the night.

Yesterday forenoon smoke was seen issuing from a barn owned by Lewis Knights and the people who hastened to put out the fire were greeted by a strange sight when they entered the building.

They found there a man, evidently a foreigner, with a pale face framed by long black hair, which fell over his shoulders. From beneath the black locks dangled above his forehead, he looked at them with questioning eyes. They are brown eyes and very handsome ones, such eyes are often found among southern people.

The man had not intended to set the barn on fire, but had started a blaze on the floor evidently with the intention of cooking. The fire, however, had spread to the hay. It was speedily put out and then the man was brought to this city by Constable Moulton, and left here for safe keeping until this morning, when he will be taken before a trial judge, probably on a charge of vagrancy.

The man had little in the way of baggage. He was shabbily, but not thinly clad, and besides the clothes he wore, his other effects were jammed into a jute bag such as is used for holding potatoes. It was a queer collection of articles in that bag. There was about half a bushel of potatoes and the carcasses of several small animals. These animals have been skinned and the carcasses prepared for cooking. Several members of the police force looked at them, but whether they were the meat of cats (poor or domestic) coons or wood chucks, no one was prepared to say. In the bag were also an old tin pail and a small tin basin, both blackened with smoke where they had been used in cooking. There was also an old felt hat with a red sock tied around it, and a heavy brown vest. The whole was jumbled up together in the bag—potatoes, meat, cooking utensils, and apparel. In one of the pockets of the vest, was the skin of a young woodchuck, which had been removed in one piece and robbed up in such a way that it took Deputy Sterling some time to unwind it, and find out just what it was.

The man could not talk English and in reply to that familiar question Parlez-vous Français?, made a statement apparently to the effect that he comprehended only Italian. He had papers showing that his name is Calro Baggio and that he has served in the Italian navy. He also had a passport from Hamburg to New York.

Mr. Roberio talked with Baggio in Italian, and succeeded in learning that the waif is an Armenian, although much of his life has been spent in Italy. He would not talk much but told Mr. Roberio that he was here looking for work and that he regarded this as a pretty poor country, where a man was looked up because he was poor. He seemed anxious to know what was to be done with him and was told he was locked up pending the acquisition of knowledge about him.

The man was seen in Portland about a week ago.

D., to erect a one story dwelling at No. 46 Montreal St.; from Wm. Pollard to enlarge a wooden building at No. 135 Oxford St., to be three stories high, 15 feet long. Granted, subject to favorable report of committee on new buildings.

Petition of Mark Bernstein for license as pawnbroker at No. 411 Fore St. Granted, subject to City Marshal's favorable report.

Alderman Little read a communication from J. C. Wood, objecting to the erection of a gallery by Mr. Stubbs in the Park Theatre, and stating that the license to keep the theatre was granted subject to the restriction of certain conditions. Mr. Wood, Inspector of Buildings, appeared before the Board and told what requirement the request of the Board of Engineers, he demanded of Mr. Stubbs to make safe the entrance and departure of audiences. With the erection of the gallery, which Mr. Stubbs has guaranteed, he considered the building unsafe. With a crowd on the floor above it all that can be done to get the audience out safely.

Alderman Thompson moved that the Marshal notify Mr. Stubbs that he must not use the gallery but must remove it, and see that the order of the Board is carried out.

Alderman Little thought it an unsafe place for a theatre anyway, with a laundry and bowling alley underneath. He seconded the motion.

The Board unanimously so voted.

THE PARK SYSTEM.

Visit of John C. Olmstead the Landscape Gardener.

Mr. John C. Olmstead, the son of Frederick Law Olmstead, the well-known landscape gardener, was in town yesterday, and together with Mayor Baxter, Commissioner of Public Works Fernald, and Park Commissioner Smith, visited the so-called boulevard and the Western Promenade, taking up most of the day. He returned to Boston on the 6 p. m. train.

The object of Mr. Olmstead's visit here, was to consider the practicability of constructing a park boulevard along the Eastern and Western Promenades and Deering's Oaks in accordance to the idea advanced in Mr. Herring's report to the city government last September. He said he could give out nothing at present. Mr. Olmstead is already at work upon a plan for the improvement of the Western Promenade and passed nearly all of the afternoon in that vicinity.

UNTIL FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 22 AT 9 A. M.,

And we will show you the Finest Stock of Tailor Made MEN'S, BOYS' and CHILDREN'S High Grade Fall and Winter Clothing Ever Shown in Your City. 88 EXCHANGE STREET, PORTLAND, ME., opposite Portland Savings Bank, near Postoffice. FORCED TO THE WALL.

Large clothing houses were forced to the wall. Surely every one knows of the great depression in every line of business throughout the land, but none have suffered so much as the clothing manufacturers that were raised way up. They were forced to go under, or realize money in some way to save their credit. The trouble with most of these business people was that they manufactured large quantities of clothing, but with the great business calamity, they could not dispose of it. We found many wholesale clothing houses on the verge of failure, and being enabled to offer them the ready cash, they refused no offers, and we secured large lots of desirable clothing at our own prices. Our object now is, to dispose of these goods quickly, as we are compelled to have the money, and at low prices, will move like a cyclone, but we will give the hard working people a chance of a lifetime to secure high grade fall and winter clothing at less than one-third its value. Many dollars worth of goods must be turned into cash within 10 days; this is an opportunity of a lifetime, and a chance like this seldom occurs, and if you fail to take advantage of it, you will surely regret it. Remember, this stock will be sold without reserve, without restriction, without any consideration or the cost of prostore, and if you wait until the doors are open, you will be well rewarded. In order to show you what gigantic bargains will be offered, a few prices here are mentioned, and remember there are a thousand other bargains we cannot enumerate.

even to secure the attendance of a sufficient number to deserve the name. Many ladies at first were disinclined to enter upon the project at all, while many others, after a little reflection, were won over to the universal desire to make themselves felt in the campaign, though the cause was not the cause of the franchise. This year, when the contest was so difficult on one side, until all finally came enthusiastic workers. The parade, more than a mile and a half in length, was viewed by thousands as it proceeded along the line of march. Many of its features were beautiful in design and exquisitely executed. The unique character of some of the displays awakened sympathetic cheers. Men, as a rule, were absent, except in a few instances where they busily officiated as drivers, or while men were lacking, babies were not, for many of them with their mothers had their first experience as component parts of a political parade. And the ladies moved and moved in their enjoyment of the outing.

Women in nearly every precinct had their regular political organizations. They held meetings and made speeches, that is, the less difficult did so, while the others listened. They aligned themselves with the different parties, usually ranging themselves with the party supported by their husbands, but occasionally finding their preference in the opposition; they talked politics tentatively with their husbands, and their tone became more confident in discussion with their less informed sisters; they attended conventions; they begged their male, friends, or even husbands, to support their favorite ticket; in fine, they went through all the motions of being in politics, though voteless.

During the last weeks of the campaign many ladies prominent in society circles canceled all their social engagements except such as were imperative, and plunged headlong into the maelstrom of politics. The example of the tacitly acknowledged leaders was promptly followed, and the result was an interregnum of the gay social season, in which society was leaderless, as it was without devotees.

The enfranchisement of women in Utah—their disenfranchisement, they term it—has had an effect different from any already mentioned. Young women who have ambitions beyond ending the triumphs of school and seminary life with endless sewing and fancy work, picture painting, or piano playing, placed on an equality with their brothers before the law, feel that the same avenues should lead to similar success, and to that end they are entering upon an eagerness and avidity of knowledge unknown to their less fortunate sisters.

The question of women's voting has produced a crop of good stories, in the main related by opponents of the idea. A young man, recently removed to this city from Wyoming, where for a quarter of a century woman has wielded the franchise, says that his experienced young wife had a hard trial when casting her first and only vote. They had just come to Wyoming from Illinois, and his wife, relying absolutely on him, had for several days before the election been carefully imbibing information as to correct deportment at the polls. According to instructions, she walked into the booth and up to the judges, then announced distinctly, "I am a Democrat." The people in the room restrained their laughter, and the new voter was handed a ballot. After marking laboriously and with many comparisons with a list of Democratic candidates, she returned the ballot, neatly folded, to the judges. She remained watching while it was being inserted into the box, then fixed her gaze upon one of the judges whom she knew. "What can I do for you?" he felt impelled to ask. "Why, I want the receipt for my vote," was the response. The consequent laughter was explained to her apologetically, and she set out with blushing eyes and reddened cheeks to find her husband, whose directions she had followed too minutely. That an irreparable break did not result speaks volumes for his powers of explanation and persuasion. The lady, it may be added, has abandoned all desire of dabbling in politics, even to the extent of casting a ballot. One experience sufficed her.

A sensible woman will not fail to keep her hands off the ballot, and on hand for out and bruises. It is unvalued. 35 cts

WAR JOURNALISM IN DIXIE.

Samples of Richmond Gossip Published in 1864.

A Paper Without "Ads," Very Rebellious, and Decidedly Averse to "Yankees."

(From the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.)

The year 1865 has been full of echoes of the "late unpleasantness," an unpleasantness that, with some thirty years more between us and April 9, 1865, seems so far away, except to a few veterans in blue or gray, as almost to have never been. With the dedication of Chickamauga, Lookout Mountain, Missionary Ridge, and the great battleground of Tennessee into a National Park, reminiscences have sprung up on every hand, and battles have been bloodlessly fought over and over again. Every fireside that can date back to the rebellion has had its contribution to give to the spirit of recollection that is abroad in the land. Some of the most interesting memories are those that are revived by the fireside and that do not get into print at all, especially in the States south of Mason and Dixon's famous line, where the battles were fought at the very doors, and where the actual incidents of war came home to the people and abide with them yet, more vividly than would be possible away from the scene of action.

But of all the rein-insistent echoes from the ex-Confederacy, there are few in the journalistic line. (Once in a while somebody runs across a Vicksburg newspaper printed on wallpaper during the siege, a Memphis Avalanche or a Richmond Whig, but journalism in the South during the civil war was of minor importance. Pressmen, editors, and reporters were needed "at the front," and a courier could bring the news of battle sooner than a crippled printing office could set the type to tell the direful news. There were newspapers, of course, with their lists of killed, wounded, and missing, and their more or less authentic accounts of victories and skirmishes, but those that could be depended upon for news were scarce, and literary publications had but few days and were full of sorrows.

Of these latter, which kept up a precarious existence, and struggled through three or four volumes, was The Southern Illustrated News, an eight-page publication, four columns to the page, published in Richmond by Messrs. Ayres & Wade, who were at once editors and proprietors, and probably, if the truth were known, compositors and pressmen, reporters and general hustlers. Two copies of this weekly, yellow with age and poor ink, have drifted into the writers' possession; they are valuable souvenirs now of the "late unpleasantness," but in a very few years they will be more valuable curios of a period that has quite passed into history. The editorial page of one bears the date, April 23, 1864, and is followed by an announcement of "terms" that, in the days of penny papers and great journals at 15 cents a week, rather takes away one's breath. It reads: Subscription, $20 per annum; $10 for six months, (no subscription taken for a less time). The trade supplied at $25 per 100. No county or individual money taken.

No line is drawn at Confederate scrip, in which, of course, the twenty-dollar subscription was paid, but even Messrs. Ayres & Wade, loose as must have been their ideas of sound money, could not go so far as to recognize the scrip made by an individual. The Confederacy might be tottering, but Messrs. Ayres & Wade would be loyal to its currency; further than that the publishers of a literary weekly could not go. "Thus it was that, though one drew pretty flourishes around a scroll saying, 'Will pay to bearer,' and had it engraved upon the thinnest and most crackly of banknote paper, with his own autograph in the highest style of chirographical art, he could not own a year's title in The Southern Illustrated News—not, not for a carload of "individual" notes. In the long run they would have been worth as much as the "shin-plasters" of the Confederacy, but the inexorable editor and publisher of the Richmond weekly did not see it that way. From the "cause" to which they were pledged they would accept worthless rags simply for the faith they had in its ultimate triumph; from their brethren nothing that called itself money unless represented by a substantial proxy, such as a ham, a bag of meal, or a load of firewood.

It is unnecessary to say that The Southern Illustrated News, in 1864, paid no dividends perceptible to the outer senses; the stockholders surely neither saw nor felt them, which is not a fact to be wondered at, since, outside of the topsy-turvy condition of the country at that time, and the shakiness of the money question, there is only one "ad" to be discovered in the entire edition of April 23, and five in the succeeding issue. There is no reason to suppose that "ads." were any more plentiful during the rest of the year than in these two copies, as the clouds gathered more thickly with the opening of the summer months, and business became more paralyzed as Johnson's weaker force skillfully retreated before Sherman's masterly movements, as Hood made his fatal mistake, and Sherman marched victoriously to the sea, with Atlanta in ashes behind him.

It is a significant item that the one advertisement referred to is that of a music house. Amid the groans of the dying and the reverberations of the death-dealing cannon, the time was profligate of songs, perhaps to drown the groans and shut out the noise of the fray. Among these pieces of "new music," for sale by "all music dealers in the Confederacy," were, "Twinkling Stars Are Laughing, Love," "The Vacant Chair," "Make Me No Gaudy Chaplet," and one piece of instrumental music, "Bourgeois's Charleston Quickstep."

If people sang with the ruins of rebellion just about to topple upon their heads, so also did they go to plays, and the dramatic critic therefore found work to do for this weekly of 1864. "Richelleu" and "Camille" were being played in Richmond, while Lee and Grant were daily drawing near the Wilderness and one James Wills, a comedian, was planning a benefit for that week in May when 5,000 gallant fellows were to lie dying in the trenches under the pines that shut in five miles of the old Fredericksburg Turnpike.

A Northerner, of course, was distinctively and offensively a "Yankee" in those days, and all things of or from the North were qualified by the same term. "The Rivals," by M. J. H., which may mean the author of "Lena Rivers," et cetera, is the prize story of this weekly, and is one of the continued variety. It is illustrated by laborious and conventional woodcuts that show at a glance the immense progress made in the art of newspaper engraving in the last thirty-one years. We are prone, all of us, to poke fun at newspaper illustrations, but until we place the stiff, hackneyed poses, the conventional arched and trees of the sixties beside the free curves and strokes even of the chalk-free pictures of 1865, we do not realize how little we have to grumble about, or to put it more truthfully, perhaps, how much we have to be thankful for.

Times were too serious in 1864 for persiflage and short paragraphs full of frivolity and merriment, so these elements are lacking in The Southern Illustrated News, but there are short articles that are above the average considerably in true literary merit.

The editorial leader of April 23 is, as becomes editorial leaders in times of serious crises, full of hope and prophecy of speedy victory. It appears just after the brilliant success at Fort Pillow, and while Grant and Lee were, in its own language, "daily menacing each other on the banks of the Rapidan and Rappahannock." It is very apparent that journalistic human nature in 1860 was the same in Richmond as in New York; victories for one's own side were magnified, and defeats made little of. But, in spite of this fact, which surprises nobody, and which is quite the right thing in war times, the little 18 by 12 inch sheets of The Southern Illustrated News are more interesting now than in their rebellious freshness, and the time may come when a year's subscription will be really worth $30, not in Confederate scrip, neither "in county no individual money," but in Uncle Sam's own certificates, redeemable in gold in every country of the world.

Petrie of the Profession. Athletic Caller—Sir, in your column this morning you spoke disrespectfully of a "red haired chorus nymph" who appeared in a comic opera at one of the theaters last night. I have called to ask for an explanation.

Musical Editor—There was no intention to offend anybody, sir. If the young lady is a friend of yours—Athletic Caller—Friend! She's my grandmother! That isn't what I'm kicking about. I'm a wigmaker. I made the wig she wore last night, and it isn't red, sir. It's a light auburn and one of the finest I ever turned out. The manager calls that wig a red one, sir, is color blind, or else he's trying to get up a row, and if he wants a fuss I can accommodate him at the drop of the hat, sir. A man who can't tell a genuine auburn from red needs education or he needs thrashing. If you'd been in the wigmaking business for five years and had always done good work and some man came along and—oh, you'll straighten it out tomorrow morning, will you? Well, that's all I want. My name's Pingood. Here's my card, and if you ever need anything in my line call around. Light auburn, remember, and will you go out and take a drink? Not this morning! Well, so long!—Chicago Tribune.

Winter Oats. Director Neil of the Delaware experiment station states that winter oats have been successfully grown at Newark, in that state, "and this is as far north as we have any knowledge of them. They have also been grown around Dover and are considered there to be quite as capable of withstanding the winter's cold as 'Pratt's' oats." T. F. Baker, one of the most intelligent farmers in Cumberland county, south Jersey, has tried winter oats several times, but has never succeeded in bringing them through the winter. Virginia Gray winter, or turf oats, according to The New England Homestead, are probably the hardest of any of the varieties offered to the public. They are claimed to be better also for spring seeding than the ordinary oat.

THE HOME.

A Young Girl's Books.

Thomas Wentworth Higginson in the Ladies' Home Journal prints a list of 100 books by American authors, which he regards as the best works for young girls of fifteen. He considers the attractive and interesting features of books in making up his list, as he holds that literary instruction should be presented in its most palatable and inviting form to youth.

In naming the best ten books for young girls Mr. Higginson says: "At the head of all available books for American girls—whether to create the love of reading or to gratify it—must be placed, of course, Miss Alcott's 'Little Women.' The young girls themselves will place it there, if we do not; and there is really no objection to be made to this prominence, beyond some occasional instances of slang or slovenly expression. With it may be classed, though perhaps written for somewhat younger readers, Miss Jane Andros's immortal 'The Seven Little Sisters who Live on the Round Ball that Floats in the Air,' a book which has for the first time brought it home to multitudes of young people that they are citizens, not merely of a nation but of a planet.

We may then pass to four classic works by classic American authors: Hawthorne's 'Wonder Book,' Longfellow's 'Evangeline,' Lowell's 'Vision of Sir Launfal,' and Whittier's 'Snowbound.' With a little less sense of perfect security we may add Irving's 'Sketch Book,' Cooper's 'Last of the Mohicans,' and Mrs. Stowe's 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' the last two having this especial value, that they introduced two new races into literature and won at once an international fame. This makes nine of the first ten, and Dr. Hale's 'Ten Times One a Ten' seems almost providential as to the fitness of its title, and may rightfully find its way.

A Good Salad.

An excellent salad is made from celery and cabbage. Select a white cabbage that is firm and hard. Cut it in quarters after having removed the loose leaves and soaking in ice cold water for awhile. Shave the cabbage fine with a sharp knife and the pointed French knife is convenient for this purpose, as it is for so many other things. These knives come in sets of three and are wide at the handle, sloping all the way to the very sharp point.

Celery is improved for the table by standing in water in which a slice of lemon or a few drops of vinegar have been added, as the salad renders it firm and crisp. For the salad put the celery fine and use equal parts of this and the cabbage. The dressing is made without oil, which recommends it to the farmer's wife who has milk or cream enough on hand. Mix one half tablespoonful of salt one half tablespoonful of mustard and one tablespoonful of sugar together. Add an egg slightly beaten, two and a half tablespoonfuls of melted butter and three-fourths of a cup of cream. Add slowly one-fourth cup of vinegar. Cook over hot water until it thickens, then strain and cool. Use the tips of the celery to garnish.

Care of Old Flowers.

With all flowers (cultivated or wild) I always cut the stems to open the pores in receiving the flowers, and with all cultivated flowers fill your vase with ice water. I often put a lump of ice in the vase as well.

Wild flowers my experience has been, freshen and keep best in water without ice.

With roses strip off all lower branches of leaves. It makes them look ungraceful and naked out of the vase, but it crowds the flowers to leave them on, and absorbs the nutriment of the water, and your roses fade in a few hours.

Twice a day for your first duty after breakfast and your last at night, give fresh ice water. Once, and in the morning, cut your stems a quarter of an inch only. At night always have flowers set in a room where there is outside air coming in—not a room where water will freeze; but for years I have had the vases of flowers set at night not far from my bed room window, which is always widely opened, and through which often snow has drifted in to no mean depth, for one's bedroom.

All this talk about putting roses in an ice box is not worth trying, unless you wish to keep buds unopened. In that case you might try it. But better than any such attempt is to keep the flowers shut in a box and oiled paper, exactly as sent by the florist, till you wish to use them. I have opened flowers three days after sent and they have been as fresh as when the box reached me and have kept as long as usual. A bunch of roses can be kept a week almost invariably if you will credit my testimony sufficiently to make use of it. And you will not gain say me that a rose is never so regal as when it is in full bloom, and a few hours before its petals fall, and after for days it has received your homage.—Correspondent Harper's Bazar.

Each of Miss Vandenberg's six bridesmaids will receive jeweled butterflies as souvenirs of the wedding. The heads of the butterflies will be of rubies and the wings of diamonds and emeralds. Tiffany is making these gifts and they will cost $500 each.

An Aeolian Will enable you to have music in your home at any and all times, without the aid of a musician. It can be used by every member of the family, as the operation of playing it is so simple that it can be learned by anyone with a few days' practice. It is not a mechanical instrument, but is capable of the most delicate shadings of tempo and expression. Any piece of music can be obtained for the Aeolian, but it is designed for and particularly adapted to the highest grades of classical and operatic music. All the Wagner Overtures and Beethoven Symphonies, together with works from all the masters, are arranged for full orchestral effect. The tone of the Aeolian is peculiarly soft and beautiful, resembling more than any other instrument, a small orchestra, with the different parts. On exhibition daily from 9 to 6. Call and hear it.

AND DYNE LINIMENT

It is marvelous how many different complaints and diseases it will cure. It was developed 50 years ago by an old fashioned, noble hearted physician, for the good of his fellow men, and is now in its 1810th year. It has stood on its own intrinsic merit, and parents transmit the knowledge of its worth to their children as a valuable inheritance. The doctor for it has steadily increased. It has probably saved more lives and afforded more relief to the suffering than any other remedy. All who use it are amazed at its wonderful effects, and are loud in its praise ever after. But afraid to trust what time has endorsed.
